IN SEARCH OF Students of The McConchie One-Room School

Original McConchie School on Blossom Point Road

Present Day at the Charles County Fairgrounds

Do you remember the McConchie One-Room School? The school was originally located at the intersection of Blossom Point and Old Port Tobacco Roads in central Charles County, Maryland. It was built in 1912 to educate local African American children, and was closed in 1952. It was moved to the Charles County Fairgrounds in 1992 and opened to the public as a museum.

Did you attend the school? Perhaps your relatives and friends did. The McConchie School Project at the Charles County Fairgrounds is searching for former students who would have attended the school up until its closing in 1952. We're also looking for family members with memories of stories told about the school.

Would you like to tell us about your experience attending the McConchie School? We would love to talk to you about your school life at McConchie. You can help preserve the history of The McConchie One-Room School for generations to come.
